Bringing Up the Bishop

Recently I had the unusual experience of participating in the exhumation of a corpse. It was the body of Bishop Winand Wigger, third Bishop of Newark, who died in 1901. The decision to dig him up was made by Archdiocesan officials, so that he could be buried in the crypt of Sacred Heart Cathedral, where other deceased Bishops have been laid to rest (Bishop O'Connor, Archbishops Walsh and Boland). Bishop Wigger was the one who laid the cornerstone of the Cathedral in 1899, but died long before construction was completed in 1954.

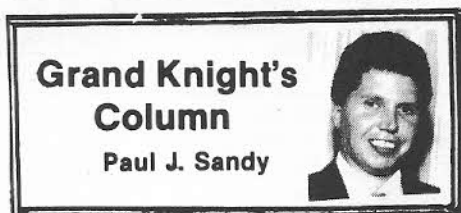

The procedure of the exhumation was reverent. The Bishop's grave, like every grave, is to be reverent. Prayers were offered, and his bones were transferred to another coffin as the priests present blessed the body. In his original coffin, which was not completely intact, the symbols of his office were found: his Bishop's ring and pectoral cross and chain, preserved perfectly. Also, a simple cloth scapular was found in very good condition.

I must say that there was something very touching about the experience. The body had been buried for 86 years. One could argue that his bones should have been left alone. Still, I think it was a proper thing to do. The whole experience prompted me to read about Bishop Wigger's life.

He was born in 1841 in New York City. Rejected by the New York Archdiocese because of poor health, he attended Seton Hall, and then went to Italy, where he was ordained in 1865. He had parish assignments in Newark, Madison, and Summit, and was consecrated a Bishop in 1881. His administration of the Newark Diocese had its ups and downs, but during his episcopacy the number of Catholics, the number of priests, sisters, and Churches, all doubled! Forty-five new Catholic schools were opened, as Wigger was a strong supporter of Catholic education. Now, he is for the first time in his spiritual home, the majestic Cathedral he started to build so long ago.

Since Bishop Wigger's death, a lot has happened in our world. Transportation and communication have changed incredibly. Unfortunately, so have attitudes and values. But the Faith he taught has not changed. The problems facing the Church continue: inadequate knowledge of the Faith, insufficient numbers of clergy, and anti-Catholic bigotry, to name but a few.

At this Christmas season, we pray for the Church! When Christ was born, so were we. He attracted followers then and now. Bishop Wigger was one of those disciples, and so are you. The Bishop was given the role of apostle for the Church at the turn of this century, and it was his faith in Jesus and his Church that gave meaning to his life. May God fill you with peace at Christmas and always. A very merry Christmas to all!

As we approach the holiday season, we should focus our attention not on gifts, trees, lights, etc. but on the Baby Jesus, our Lord and Savior. We sometimes seem to get so caught up in the hustle and bustle of the Christmas season, that we forget what it's really all about.

I would like to congratulate Father Robert Emery and Father Mark Wegg on their ordination to the Priesthood. We are very proud of them. The Knighthood Degree which was held on November 25, 1987 was in their honor.

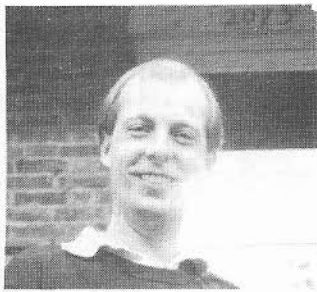

I am instituting a Food Drive Program at the Council (see enclosed article). Food can be dropped off at the club at any time. There will be a drop off point in our card room. Please try to bring in canned food and other non-perishable items. This program will help the needy people in our area.

January 22 is a very important date. Thanks to Stan Firuta and his Right to Life Committee, we raised over $1,200 to send a bus to Washington, D.C. to participate in the March for Life. If you are interested in participating, please call me.

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year to all of you and your families.
